THE WARREN ALPERT MEDICAL SCHOOL

Search for the Senior Associate Dean for Medical Education

The Warren Alpert Medical School (AMS) of Brown University invites applications and nominations for the position of Senior Associate Dean for Medical Education. Since granting its first Doctor of Medicine degrees in 1975, AMS has been a national leader in medical education and biomedical research. AMS resides in one of the finest facilities of its kind in the country and in the immediate vicinity of seven affiliated institutions that serve a diverse population of one and one half million people. The School's goal is to inspire and cultivate physician scholars, scientists, and leaders who positively impact the health of people and society.

Reporting to the Dean of Medicine and Biological Sciences, the Senior Associate Dean for Medical Education oversees a complex education enterprise that spans student life, student inclusion and diversity, curriculum, educational improvement, and admissions at an institution poised for further growth and innovation. The Senior Associate Dean for Medical Education supports and helps to advance the Doctor of Medicine program in addition to AMS's unique educational programs such as the Program in Liberal Medical Education, the Primary Care-Population Medicine Program, the Gateways to Medicine, and Healthcare and Research program. The Senior Associate Dean will join AMS at a time of change, growth, and transformation. The School will welcome its new dean in March 2022 and its two major clinical affiliates, Lifespan and Care New England, could potentially merge, with Brown University, to form an integrated academic health system. This is an excellent opportunity to be part of a new leadership team that will continue to solidify AMS as a leading medical school in the 21st century.

The next Senior Associate Dean for Medical Education at AMS will be an innovative and progressive leader with a firm grasp of the emerging challenges and opportunities in medical education and patient care. The Senior Associate Dean must be an experienced and committed manager, teacher, and collaborator who is passionate about medical education and research. The Senior Associate Dean will need to be excellent at sustaining positive relationships, mentoring, and expanding partnerships. The Senior Associate Dean will personally demonstrate a commitment to diversity, equity, and inclusion, and support AMS's related initiatives.
