

Call for Applications for Editor-in-Chief
The Journal of Infectious Diseases (JID)
An Official Journal of the Infectious Diseases Society of America

The IDSA Journal of Infectious Diseases Editor-in-Chief Search Committee seeks applications for the next Editor-in-Chief of *The Journal of Infectious Diseases when Martin S. Hirsch, MD, FIDSA, completes his term on Dec. 31, 2022.

Published continuously since 1904, JID is the premier global journal for translational research on infectious diseases. It publishes Major Articles and Brief Reports describing original research on microbes, immunology and host defense, epidemiology and the pathogenesis, diagnosis and treatment of infectious diseases. JID is an official publication of the Infectious Diseases Society of America.

IDSA is seeking an individual with a strong record of academic excellence in translational research with wide and inclusive knowledge of the field of infectious diseases to guide JID's development and advancement over the next 5–10 years. The successful applicant will demonstrate a compelling strategic vision for the journal's ongoing development and differentiation from the Society's other two journals, Clinical Infectious Diseases and Open Forum Infectious Diseases, and other reputable journals in the field; excellent communication skills; a commitment to working collaboratively with the editorial team, staff and publisher as well as with the editors of IDSA's other journals; a profound commitment to diversity, inclusion, access and equity; a clear understanding of trends in scientific journal publishing, including optimizing digital functionality and the deployment of social media channels; an international network of colleagues; and deep editorial experience. Candidates should also have deep understanding of the challenges faced by the field of infectious diseases with a passion to build awareness and improve its visibility.

The Editor-in-Chief is supported by a Deputy Editor, 12 Associate Editors, 3 Statistical Editors and a large and diversified Editorial Board, as well as a Managing Editor, Manuscript Coordinators and IDSA publications staff. The position is a part-time role, and the editor-in-chief may be located anywhere. The full job description for the editor-in-chief position is available online at <https://academic.oup.com/jid/pages/eic-position>.

Applications should include:

- Full CV;
- A letter summarizing your vision and goals for JID over the next 5 years (2023–2027);
- A letter of support from your institution (approximately 40% release time; all editorial management and administrative support will be provided by IDSA);
- Two letters of recommendation from your peers that address your research, medical writing and editorial abilities.

Applications should be sent via email to the Chair, JID Editor-in-Chief Search Committee, c/o Lisa Junker, IDSA Senior Director of Publishing & Content Strategy, ljunker@idsociety.org.

Applications are due no later than July 1, 2021. Interviews will be conducted virtually in September/October 2021.