

Search for Immunocompromised Host/Transplant ID and General ID Clinician

The Division of Infectious Diseases at University of California, San Francisco, School of Medicine seeks a clinician with expertise in the care of general and/or transplant/immunocompromised patients. The faculty member would be involved in both the care of patients in the inpatient and outpatient settings. The position will likely include up to 80% direct patient care time and at least 20% administrative/creative time. The faculty member will care for patients on inpatient consult services located at Parnassus or at affiliated hospitals. The faculty member will also provide care for patients in one or more of the UCSF outpatient ID Clinics (General ID, Transplant ID, or HIV). The faculty member will be expected to participate in teaching of students, residents, and fellows. Opportunities for participation in creative work includes clinical research, clinical leadership, QI, and medical education. Candidates must have an MD, DO, or MD-PhD degree from an approved LCME medical school, satisfactory completion of an Internal Medical residency program from an ACGME-accredited program, be eligible for California medical licensure, and board-certified or board-eligible in ID. The Appointment will be at the Assistant, Associate, or Professor level commensurate with experience. The UCSF, Division of Infectious Diseases greatly values diversity and encourages applicants of all race, ethnicity, gender identity, sexual orientation, religion, national origin, disability, age, or protected veteran status to apply.

Qualified applicants should apply online via AP Recruit at <https://apptrkr.com/2567636> and submit a cover letter, CV, a statement of contributions to diversity, and contact information of three (3) references. Applicants' materials must list current and/or pending qualifications upon submission.

UC San Francisco seeks candidates whose experience, teaching, research, or community service has prepared them to contribute to our commitment to diversity and excellence.

The University of California is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer. All qualified applicants will receive consideration for employment without regard to race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, national origin, disability, age or protected veteran status.
