

Executive Vice President, University of California Health University of California – Office of the President

University of California Health (UC Health) represents and promotes collaboration amongst the University's clinical, health professional education, and research arms, consisting of the University of California's six academic health centers and twenty health professional schools at UC Berkeley, UC Davis, UC Irvine, UCLA, UC Riverside, UC San Diego, and UC San Francisco.

Reporting to the President of the University of California, the Executive Vice President (EVP) is a responsible member of the executive leadership team in the Office of the President and supports the President's goals, objectives, and priorities in health areas. The EVP maintains collaborative relationships with the Chancellors, Vice Chancellors of Health, health professions Deans, Academic Medical Center CEOs, and the Academic Senate.

Under the EVP, the UC Health Division in the UC Office of the President focuses on four priorities: positioning the University of California as a partner with the State to realize health improvement goals, facilitating collaborative investments that increase fiscal resilience of each of the health campuses, advancing distinction and excellence through collective action, and increasing access to health services in regions that have been underserved. The EVP achieves these objectives by providing policy leadership, fostering systemwide collaboration, and catalyzing innovation across the health campuses.

This is a highly visible, interactive, and inclusive position that requires direct and continuous interaction with leadership of all components of the University of California.
